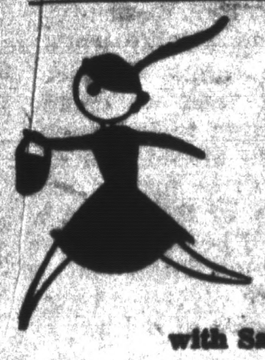
Scouting the Shops



with Sally

● It was John's idea to begin with.

● "You know, dear," he said, laying down his evening paper, "I think 1940 is a good time to start a budget."

● "We don't like budgets," we objected. "They never balance!"

● "That's because they're not properly made," John explained patiently. "It's a very simple undertaking. You merely write down what you're going to buy during the year and what you're going to spend for it. Saves all kinds of money."

● Well, it did sound like a wonderful idea. And John knows all about stocks and bonds and Wall Street and such, so his family gathered around him with unquestioning faith while he sharpened a pencil.

● "Now then," said John, opening a ledger with a flourish, "on one side you merely list all your expenses. For instance: Expenditure: 3 quarts of milk per day from the Mission Creamery for 365 days, let's see—that's—" he began figuring feverishly on a scrap of paper.

● "Gee, Pop," remarked Sammy. "Your budget's all wet. There are 366 days in 1940."

● But John was absorbed in his work. "And then there is Beeson Cleaners, for cleaning during the year. Can't neglect your appearance—" he began figuring again.

● By this time, we were all beginning to get the spirit of the thing and we listed rent and groceries and lights and gas.

● "And we mustn't forget those small unexpected items," said John. "Repairs for instance. Byrne will repair almost anything for a very small sum, but we must make an appropriation for it. That's the reason most budgets don't work," John went on, "people forget those small items. And then there is your garden in the spring. By the way, Sally," he said looking at us sternly, "The Daly City Nursery is advising people to plant now."

● We had covered about four sheets of paper with all the things we were going to buy, when John began to look very worried and started adding up the figures.

● "Don't forget our birthday parties, Daddy," interrupted Sue Ann. "I want some cake and ice cream and a lot of kids—"

● John looked even more worried. "Oh, that won't cost much," we hastened to reassure him. "With some pretty, bright Jello from Lucca Ravioli, trimmed with colored marshmallows, and a nice big cake from Geneva Bakery, we'll get along splendidly. Colored napkins are only 5c a package at the Daly City Cut Rate and apples 20c a dozen."

● So John wrote down 4 birthday cakes, while Sammy suddenly spoke up. "What about shows at the Daly City theatre?" he demanded.

● "Yes, we really should make a small appropriation for recreation," we said. "The Night Owls hold their second jitterbug contest this coming Saturday."

● "Hmm," said John, and wrote down "Dinners at the Hilltop."

● Then just as we were thinking of some tactful way of mentioning a new fur coat, John arrived at an answer in his addition.

● "Something must be wrong," he announced in a very dismayed voice. "This can't be right. We're nearly $300 over my salary for the year."

● "There, dear," we soothed him. "We can cut down some place." But we felt pretty worried ourselves.

● "Every Wednesday is free ladies' night at the Mission Recreation center," we reminded him. (We love playing ping-pong even if we can't hit a ball.) "And Farmers Meat company carries the most delicious corned beef and pork. And look at Milo's ad this week: margarine, 11c; Zee towels to save on the laundry; yellow cornmeal, 4 lbs. for 15c. And eggs are down to 22c a dozen at Robertson's."

● Well, we worked until midnight over that budget, cutting it down dollar by dollar. John's hair was on end, he was snowed under by crumpled papers and his disposition grew steadily worse. And all the time we kept remembering more and more of those small unexpected items, like doctor's bills. However, with the aid of prescriptions and cold remedies from Edwards Drug store, we kept them down.

● But by one o'clock John suddenly grinned in triumph and called for some coffee from Westlake market to celebrate. We couldn't think of even one more small unexpected item, (which was a good thing because we couldn't have squeezed in so much as an extra toothbrush) and we were only $50 over John's salary. He hoped to make that up in commissions.

● It was hours later that John wakened us out of a sound sleep.

● "Sally," he said grimly through the darkness, "do you know what we forgot? The taxes. All of them."

● We tried to think of something to say. But we couldn't. Because it occurred to us with a sickening jolt that we had also forgotten the payments on the car.

● John is right. It is those small unexpected items that wreck a budget.

Noon to Midnight Bathing

Oslo, the capital of Norway, is famous among tourists for its bathing facilities. You can have a "private" beach on many an islet, or you can have noon to midnight bathing at the fine beaches at Ingierstrand, Bygdoy, Bygdones and at Hvalstrand.

Wesley's Night Cap

Nearly 200 years ago John Wesley left his favorite white cotton night cap in an inn at Newton Abbot, England. The innkeeper's family treasured it as an heirloom, but has now sent it to the Wesley museum.

Russian Wild Boars

Most of the Russian wild boar enumerated by game census-takers in America are in Graham county, North Carolina. They were imported by an Englishman who planned a magnificent game preserve.

Public Invited To Craft Display

To ascertain which adult crafts will prove most popular in local WPA Recreation classes, Bruce H. Boynton, local department head, has invited the Tobias Craft Supply to put on a demonstration at the Recreation office, 101 Parkview avenue, during the afternoon and evening of January 15.

Included in the numerous crafts to be demonstrated will be Indian arts, marionette making, woodcraft, claycraft, leathercraft, metalcraft, corkcraft, beadcraft, block printing, finger printing, woodburning and Marlite work.

"This is an adult project," stated Boynton, "and we extend a cordial invitation to those who are interested to attend this exhibit. Groups will be formed into classes for many of these new crafts, which will be added to the present curriculum. These classes will offer a more diversified program for the choice of hobbies in handicrafts."

Announce Winners In Christmas Contest

Mr. and Mrs. Espie Stafford won first prize for the best Christmas decoration in Garden Village last week. Mr. and Mrs. George Nickson took second and Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Reeves Smith, third. Fourth place went to Mr. and Mrs. Bill Davidson.

Pictures of the first three prize-winning displays will appear in The Record next week, with complete details of the contest.

'In France's Fields'

Every American is familiar with John McCrae's World war poem "In Flanders' Fields"; but not many know that he himself was killed in 1918 and was buried in a quiet little war cemetery at Wimereux, France, where hundreds visit his grave every year.

WINS TRUCK DRIVING CHAMPIONSHIP AGAIN

Chicago—For the second successive year, Edson A. Smith of Detroit has won the title of "World's Champion Truck Driver" by defeating the safest and most capable drivers of twenty states. He scored 97.6 out of a possible 100 in the finals of the National Truck Rodeo held in Chicago recently under the auspices of the American Trucking Association.

Frank Steed, Georgia champion, placed second with a score of 93.4. Strange to say Steed was runner-up last year and repeated in holding second position. The drivers were required to guide their vehicles through all sorts of difficult situations and were penalized for violations of safety rules or for touching objects. The contest was close all the way. Each man handled his tractor-semi-trailer unit easily and quickly. One after another they backed into a space between two parked automobiles, with only 12 inches clearance on each side.

The Rodeo also included precautions taken in night driving such as the placing of flares, etc. It was staged in the huge parking lot of Soldiers Field, Chicago. Handsome trophies were awarded the winning drivers.

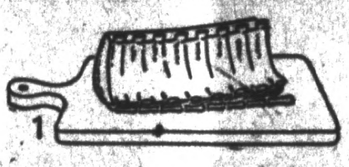
Learn to Carve Pork Loin; It's Easy, and Here's How

THE ART OF CARVING PORK LOIN

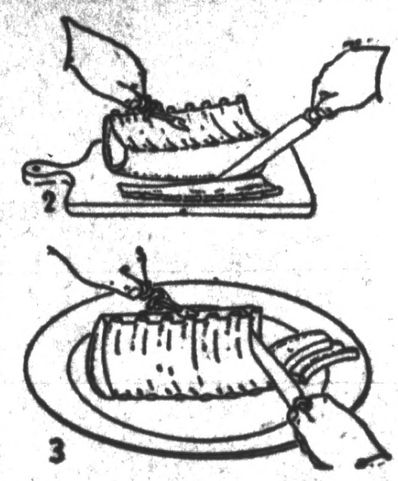


1. Note how the backbone has become loosened during cooking. The roast has been placed on a carving board, so that the backbone may be removed before the roast is placed on the platter.

2. Just one sweep of the knife will sever the backbone from roast.

3. Here is the roast on the platter in the correct position for the carver. The ribs, you see, are toward him where they will serve as guide to the direction the knife should take.

The carver should hold the roast steady by inserting the fork in the top as shown in the illustration. Roast pork is more tempting if the slices are cut thin. The carver cuts close against both sides of each rib. Every other slice will be boneless. If the loin is small, the slice will be thin enough if the cut is made between each pair of ribs—then every slice will contain a rib. With a large loin, two boneless slices may be cut between ribs.



Do you smile brightly at your guests, Mrs. Homemaker, but groan inwardly when the head of the house picks up the carving knife and prepares to attack the roast? If so, get this information to friend husband and the next time you serve a loin roast of pork you can relax, secure in the thought that the carving will be expertly done.

According to Max O. Cullen, carving expert of the National Live Stock and Meat Board, the first step in carving a loin of pork is the homemaker's responsibility and takes place in the meat market. When you order a pork loin, request the retailer to saw across the ribs close to the backbone. If this is not done, the carver encounters difficulty when the knife reaches the place where backbone meets ribs.

The backbone becomes loosened during roasting, and it can be removed easily in the kitchen. When this has been done, it is just as easy to carve a loin roast as it is one with no bones at all.

Cullen has some other tips on carving which will stand the host in good stead, whatever the meat to be carved. And he gives him a little leeway about standing or sitting. Convention does not forbid standing up to carve, if it is easier.

A dull knife complicates carving. It probably will be your job to see that the knife has a keen edge before it reaches the table.

Neat, unform slices result only when the carver steers a straight course once he has started to make the cut. It may require some practice to keep from changing the angle of the blade, but doing so is the real test of the expert.

ALICE FAYE AND DON AMECHE HEAD CAST IN TECHNICOLOR "HOLLYWOOD CAVALCADE"

Alice Faye and Don Ameche, photographed in glorious Technicolor, head a memorable cast in Darryl F. Zanuck's great human drama, "Hollywood Cavalcade," now playing at the Daly City theatre.

The romance of Hollywood from bathing beauties to world premieres staged anew, this magnificent picture tells in thrilling and highly entertaining fashion the story of Mike, a "prop" boy consumed with the desire to make pictures, and Molly, who wanted only to be loved by Moke, but who was swept along to greatness on the screen.

Those memorable Mack Sennett bathing beauties stroll again beside Castle Rock on Santa Monica beach, but this time lovely Alice Faye is one of their number. Buster Keaton, Ben Turpin, Chester Conklin and those inimitable Keystone Cops cavort again in slapstick, custard-pie comedy. Al Jolson sings again "Kol Nidre," the song with which he electrified the world in "The Jazz Singer," the first talking picture ever made.

Companion feature on the new bill is "The Man They Could Not Hang," starring Boris Karloff.

Cermak Memorial

The Cermak Memorial plaque, in Bayfront park at Miami, bears the following inscription: "I'm glad it was me instead of you." Anton J. Cermak, mayor of Chicago—Born May 9, 1873, Kladno, Czecho-Slovakia—Died March 6, 1933, Miami, Fla. It was here February 15, 1933, that an attempt was made to assassinate Franklin Delano Roosevelt. This shot mortally wounded Anton J. Cermak who then uttered the immortal words quoted above. Dedicated March 6, 1939.

Life of Famous Clown

Toto, the famous clown, whose real name was Armando Novello, was born in Geneva. He became an entertainer of note on the continent, specializing in pantomime and performed before Czar Nicholas of Russia in 1911 and Kaiser Wilhelm in 1913. His American debut was in "Hip, Hip, Hooray," the Hippodrome spectacle of 1915. He returned to Europe for several engagements, making his final royal appearance before King George V and Queen Mary in 1931. He died in the Bronx hospital in New York on December 15, 1938.

House Fly Massacre

Pupils of the ninth grade at Tiffin, Ohio, told that every housefly killed now means millions less later in the season, killed 8,226 of the insects in one week. They computed that their victims would have been ancestors of 49,336,000,000,000,000 buzzing, disease-breeding descendants by next fall.

Bright Bites are these Canapes and Appetizers

A tray of Canapés and Appetizers starts a guest meal off with a flourish.

By Dorothy Greig

SHARP, bright flavor is the test of a good canapé or appetizer. Its mission in life is to wake up appetite. So we make our appetizer a small bite but a keen one. We serve it as an accompaniment to tomato juice or other refreshers. Then, before the effect has had time to wear off, we gently herd our guests to the dining table, primed to anticipation for the good food that is to follow.

As first aids to the clever hostess we suggest these bright bites:

Toasted Tomato Ham Canapé

1 cup boiled ham, ground
½ cup cheese, ground or grated
½ teaspoon grated horse-radish
½ teaspoon prepared mustard
½ cup condensed tomato soup
6 slices bread, toasted

Mix the ground ham, cheese, horse-radish, mustard and tomato soup together. Toast the bread, trim off crusts and cut each slice into 3 or 4 strips. Spread with the mixture, then toast under broiler until delicately browned.

Smoky Celery Canapés

1 package (3 oz.) cream cheese
¼ cup condensed celery soup
1 cup salami, ground

Cream the cheese and add the celery soup. Then add the ground salami and mix well. Spread mixture on toast or crackers and heat under the broiler until golden brown.

Stuffed Celery

½ cup Roquefort cream spread
2 tablespoons condensed tomato soup

Cream the cheese with the tomato soup. Use the crisp, tender white stalks of celery. Wash well and drain. Then fill the grooves with the cheese-tomato filling. Makes about 15 stalks stuffed celery 3 inch lengths.

Satire and National Life

Satire, like the poet's Lily of Malud, is born of corruption; and the "secret mud" that generates it is full of poisonous germs of suspicion, envy, hatred, malice and all uncharitableness. In the literature of a nation satire is generally one of the latest forms of self-expression to be developed and brought to perfection. For the natural impulse of literature, and especially of poetry, is the celebration of what is beautiful and revered.

Roman Church

One of the places in Rome which interests American visitors is the Church of Santa Maria Maggiore whose gilded ceiling designed by Sangallo is covered with the first gold which Columbus brought from the New world.

No Passport Required

Andorra, the tiny country which nestles in the Pyrenees between France and Spain, is the only country in Europe which requires no passport for entry.

Mystery of Lake's Color

A score of scientists have arrived at Ivrea, Italy, to try to solve the mystery of a lake which changed in color from blue to red overnight. Lake Sirio, one of a group of seven lakes in the Ivrea region, not only turned redder and redder hour by hour, but it also became much "stickier."

Check Program Popularity

The popularity of radio-programs can now be checked by the advertisers, by means of two new automatic devices which record the stations to which the listeners tune in.

Television Make-Up

Due to the fact that the television camera does not record red, green make-up has to be used in preparing performers for television broadcasts

WINDOW SHOPPING IN NEW YORK

By JANE ROVER

NEW YORK—Did you know that mousetraps should be black, that bedrooms should be flesh-colored, that kitchen utensils should have different colored handles, and that ten-dollar bills should be blue?

Well, that's what I've just learned from Frederic Rahr, Julian Garnsey, and Faber Birren, who between them probably know more about color than any other three people in the world. Rahr is an expert on consumer color preferences, and the inventor of the new yellow baseball. Garnsey, former president of the Art Students' League here, is chief of exterior color for the New York World's Fair. Birren is the country's best-known color psychologist.

All three experts were called into consultation for the designing of the "House of Outside Color" exhibit now showing at Rockefeller Center, and it was there that I listened to them the other day, at an open discussion with a number of architects, interior decorators, builders, paint people, and asphalt shingle men. I gathered some startling notes, which, I think, would be more interesting to you now, what with Christmas shopping just over, than items about what's left in the Fifth Avenue windows.

Psychologically, the ideal colors for the different rooms of a home are:

Living room—Buff, ivory, brown, any other warm color that suggests conviviality.

Kitchen — Green, yellow, with spots of bright, contrasting red or blue, so as to give a light, airy effect, and to reflect cheerfulness.

Bedroom—Here a note of intimacy should be struck, so use flesh colors, such as salmon, etc.

Dining room — Here use edible colors—such as tans, brown, lettuce green, orange.

Rumpus room—Red for hilarity.

Why should kitchen utensils have different colored handles? Because usually they're placed on a shelf with only the handles visible, and the housewife has to pull out several before she gets the one she wants. If a color-range from dark to light were used—darker colors for the large pots and lighter ones for the small colors — housewives would save a lot of time.

Baby carriages should be white, not black. Why? Because they're used mostly in the summertime, and light colors, which reflect sun rays instead of absorbing them as do black colors, will help keep the carriages cooler.

Houses, the experts agreed, should be more brightly colored. There should be no blacks, or greys, or any dull colors, for they have a depressive effect. The happy home—so far as the interior color is concerned—is one painted with yellow and blue, green and white, red and buff, or any other contrasting colors which throw out a cheerful aura that's likely to make your husband's footsteps beat faster as he rounds the corner coming home.

Particularly should we give attention to colored roofs. Dull and colorless housetops, think the experts, have blanketed our homes and our dispositions much too long. Color, more color, is what the roofs of the country need. A perfect one, I was told, would be a colorful asphalt shingle blend which combines and harmonizes with all the other colors used on the outside of the house.

Our currency should be colored differently, too—to make it easier to distinguish. The experts recommend green for $1 bills, black for $2 bills (which all gamblers consider unlucky), red for $5 bills, blue for $10, brown for $20, orange for $50, jade for $100, purple for $500, and gold for $1,000.

Or, at least, so say the color experts.

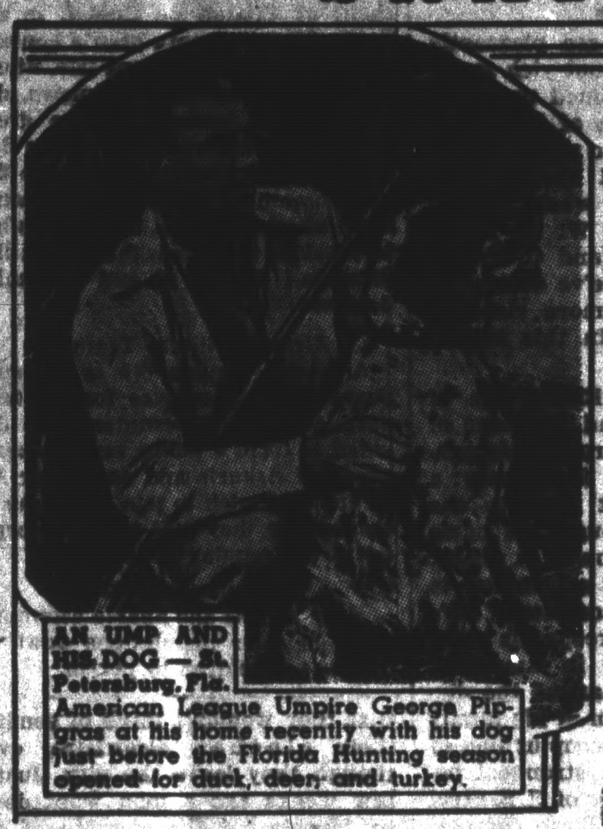
THE RECORD SNAPSHOTS



AN UMP AND HIS DOG — St. Petersburg, Fla. American League Umpire George Pipgras at his home recently with his dog just before the Florida Hunting season opened for duck, deer and turkey.

"GAY TWENTIES" is the name Russell Patterson, (insert) gives to this pencil slim black crepe evening gown, one of a collection of six this noted American artist created, exclusively for Arnold Constable, Fifth Avenue, New York's oldest department store. Note the eleven yards of pink net swooping out from just above the knee.

Jitterbugs Start New Year Right

The second of a series of four jitterbug contests will be held at the Night Owls dance, Lovchen Gardens, Colma, Saturday night.

Contestants are chosen from every dance to enter the final contest at which trophies will be awarded to the winners, February 3.

Winners of the first dance of the contest were Chuck Revira and Wanda Kalenswki.

This is the Night Owls' first dance of the new year. The public is invited to attend and help start things off with a bang. Night Owls expect that their dances, held the first and third Saturday evenings of each month, will prove even more successful in 1940 than in 1939.

A modern swing orchestra will supply union music for the contests.

Roman Catholic Tribunal

The Sacra Romana Rota is one of the three great tribunals of the Roman Catholic church. To it are assigned all contentious cases that require a judicial investigation with proof; except the so-called major cases. It also acts as a court of appeals. The auditors are appointed by the pope and must be both priests and prelates and have a doctor's degree in both theology and canon law. Auditors do not actively function after 70 years of age. The head of the Rota at present is His Serene Excellency, Msgr. Graziolo Decano, Collegio del Prelate Uditori, Vatican City.

Turkish Messengers

The ancient Turkish nobles employed many lackeys and footmen, called peichs, as messengers. These couriers ran in their bare feet until continuous exercise of this sort overall types of roads so deadened and calloused their feet that they were able to shoe themselves with horseshoes. To increase the resemblance between themselves and horses they carried a silver bit in their mouths while on errands for their masters.

Flounder Houses

A flounder-house is a house with one wall entirely blank, built against a party line, and a single pitch roof sloping downward toward the opposite, lower side, thus shedding water on the owner's property. This type was often used for the rear extension of residences. They were built during the Eighteenth century. There are some of them now in Alexandria and Philadelphia.

Sunniest German Resort

The Black forest of Germany is white in winter when the ski races are held and black in summer, if the shadows beneath its trees can be called black. Actually, Freudenstadt in the Black forest is famous as the sunniest resort in Germany.

Egg Experiment

The University of California experimented for a year to ascertain if egg production could be increased by keeping the hens in cooled henhouses. The answer was, "No." Only one thing was ascertained, the university reported, and this was that in the hot days the hens were noticeably more comfortable in the cooled henhouses.

Indian Bible Oldest

The first Bible published in America was printed in the Indian language after the translation of the missionary John Eliot. It was issued in 1663, more than a century before part of the Book was published in English in 1777. A few years later, in 1782, a complete English version was issued in Philadelphia.

IT HAPPENS IN NEW YORK

by ROGER EVANS

NEW YORK—Taking a cue from highly successful resorts such as Miami Beach and Sun Valley, New York City has awakened to do some publicizing for itself.

For the city has opened an impressive, modernistic Information Center, where you can find out anything you want about where to go, how to get there, and what to do in this town. It's ideally located, being just in front of the Grand Central Terminal, and across the street from the site where the new Air Terminal (for buses of all the air lines) is rising.

Behind the Center's question booths, where polite,— attractive young ladies answer your questions, there's a huge diorama of the city —84 by 18 feet in size. It's furnished with a lot of intriguing electrical animation and moving models, and gives you a swell capsule idea of the points of interest and transportation facilities of New York.

At the dedication ceremonies the other day the city officials and other guests got to hear Clifton Fadiman, noted inquisitor for the "Information Please" radio show, try to stump Hizzoner Fiorello H. La Guardia with some questions about New York.

Fadiman's first question had to do with locating four well-known New York alleys—Tin Pan, Peacock, MacDougal, and Shubert. The Mayor, as usual, did quite well. He located Tin Pan Alley as "the shops in midtown Manhattan where music is manufactured"; Peacock Alley he said was "in the lobby of the old Waldorf-Astoria"; and MacDougal Alley he identified as his old neighborhood down in Greenwich Village, west of Washington Square. He was, however, a little shaky on Shubert Alley, of theatrical fame. "Somewhere between Thirty-fourth and Seventy-second—don't press me on it," he pleaded. Fadiman passed this answer, though he explained that Shubert Alley was really between Forty-fourth and Forty-fifth.

The Mayor was also able to name —in backward order—the six mayors preceding himself — "O'Brien, McKee, Walker, Hylan, Mitchel and Kline," he rattled off.

But then came an embarrassing question. Mr. Fadiman, ready to leave, asked where his hat and coat were. The ceremonies were held up for almost ten minutes while the Mayor's aides looked all over the place. They finally found them, though.

People, it seems, are pleasantly surprised to hear about rich men's sons who have remained unspoiled and made something of their own careers. We've had so many replies from the thumbnail sketches we included here a few weeks ago on Nelson Rockefeller, W. A. Harriman, Ed Stettinius, and C. V. and Jock Whitney that we've decided to give you a couple more rich-boy-makes-good stories in this installment.

Junius Morgan — Eldest son of the present J. P., and grandson of the fabulous J. Pierpont Morgan. Junius, who at 46 is already a grandfather, is first heir to the Morgan fortune, though his name is hardly known to the U. S. public. Shy and retiring, his set answer to interviewers is "No comment." He's so reserved that he keeps his name out of "Who's Who in America." Yet he has ably enhanced the dignity and conservatism of his family name, and he now occupies one of the financial world's strongest positions. He's a director of U. S. Steel and numerous other large corporations, and is also active in many big charities. Junius Morgan gives vent to enthusiasm only when it comes to airplanes. He flies everywhere in his own plane, daily making the trip from his Long Island home to the seaplane base at the foot of Wall Street, only a few blocks from "No. 23," the headquarters of the House of Morgan.

Count Theo Rossi—Heir of the Rossi family who own Martini & Rossi, world's biggest vermouth firm. Handsome, dashing and only 37, the Count, with an estimated $2,000,000 a year income, is often called the "world's most eligible bachelor." He's best known to the public for his international sporting accomplishments—winning the major American speedboat races last year, captaining Italy's Olympic bob-sled team, and keeping one pace ahead of mothers with marriageable daughters. But the Count, to those who know him, is much more active as a business man, for he's an astute salesman, and a potent good-will ambassador for his firm. Just a short time ago he introduced a distinctive new square vermouth glass here (it was actually his own design), and now all the people in the smart places are trying the "Count Rossi," a mild straight Italian vermouth drink.

Civilization Kills

Civilization proved too much for the youth who left the loneliest isle in the world. After less than a year in London he died. Donald Glass was a direct descendant of the William Glass who founded the settlement at Tristan da Cunha, in the South Atlantic, more than a century ago. Donald left a happy isle, where disease is practically unknown, determined to succeed in the great world. He was accepted by the Boy Scouts, who tried to make life for him something like that in the home from which he came, but they failed to consider the germs that afflict civilization. He fell ill and gradually declined.

African Military Training

Although Tanganyika is not supposed to train natives for military purposes, the government has decided to form a police reserve composed of Askaris and any other Africans who wish to join. In time of emergency they will be incorporated in the regular police force.

Population Control

Both Athens and Sparta attempted to hold their populations down by exposing children to perish.

Window Shopping in New York

By JANE ROVER

NEW YORK—There's a laundry here in New York which, believe it or not, charges you seventy-five cents to wash a pair of pajamas. They've got more business than they want, too.

It's run by A. Sulka & Company, expensive and oh, so veddy, veddy fashionable Fifth Avenue haberdashers. If you've ever walked along Fifth you've probably noticed their windows, which are always filled with a lot of costly-looking men's silk handkerchiefs and neckties.

Several years ago at Sulka's they decided the store should have a laundry. Store clothes which had to be washed were just not being laundered as the Sulka management thought they should be. So one of the assistant managers was sent to the Hotel Biltmore laundry, where for almost a year he studied and got practical training for the washing business.

Then he started a laundry for Sulka's. It worked so nicely that Sulka's decided to offer the service to their customers, and now they have a steady trade.

All clothes are washed in olive oil, and everything is ironed by hand. The collars of all the shirts that come in are periodically measured, to see if there's been the slightest shrinkage or stretching. A Sulka laundry customer never, of course, gets back a shirt that's frayed or missing a button.

As for prices, soft shirts cost thirty-five cents to launder; dress shirts fifty cents. Pajamas are seventy-five, while a pair of socks will cost fifteen.

Sulka's average laundry customer will send in eleven shirts a week, five pair of pajamas, and run up a bill of a little more than $10.

Regular Sulka customers get so excited over these laundry results that they wouldn't think of sending their clothes elsewhere, even though they leave the city. Just a few weeks ago a man went down to Florida for the opening of the Miami Beach season. Even though more than a thousand miles from Sulka's in New York, he has continued to send his laundry back, airmail, every week. Besides his bill to the laundry, he's got a $10 or $11 airmail charge to pay, each way.

Sulka's say they don't try to make money off their laundry—it's just a special extra service, which must pay for itself. There's no drumming up of trade; as a matter of fact, laundry will not usually be accepted from a person who does not buy his clothes at Sulka's store. Even a regular Sulka customer will be frowned upon if he continues to include in his laundry odd shirts and handkerchiefs that he purchased at another store.

The Christmas shopping period was a swell one for New York merchants. A survey of twenty leading stores last week reveals that holiday sales were up five or six percent above those of 1938. Luxury buying, it was reported, was particularly on the increase, with sales of fur coats 10 to 12 percent ahead of those of a year ago.

Your correspondent got around to one of the most highly touted deb parties of the season the other evening—that which saw the introduction to society of Miss Lois Warner, a pretty young Bryn Mawr undergraduate who is one of the possible successors to the "Deb of the Year" title held last year by Brenda Frazier. The evening dresses there, I noticed, showed unmistakable signs of "Gone With the Wind" influence. Compared with what I saw a few months ago, the new gowns the girls were wearing had much less sleekness and sophistication, and much more crinoline, taffeta, off-the-shoulder effects, and much wider skirts. And at the party I didn't see a single example of that bustle we were hearing so much about the first of the season.

London Club

The Bachelor's club of London, one of that city's social best, dates from 1881.

Winter Rooms Need Gaiety

Mirrors are the magicians of winter decoration.

This is what a well known decorator said the other day when asked about the simplest way of bringing light and gaiety into a room during the winter. The homemaker who knows her decoration "A, B, C's" will agree with him, for mirrors have charm to enliven any type of room.

For instance, if you have a nice window group make the most of every bit of sunlight that comes in during the winter by hanging a polished plate glass mirror directly opposite it. If you have a scenic wall paper, focus interest upon it by reflection in a mirror. If you have a cozy furniture grouping by the fireplace, hang a mirror so that it will reflect the leaping flames of the fire and the group and see what a decorative wall panel you achieve.

Illustrated is an interesting example of the way in which a mirror can be hung to catch light and sunshine from a window or windows. This particular mirror is one which introduces a new trend in framing—the use of colored mirror glass designed on lines suggestive of an old mahogany frame.

Framed in blue plate glass, the mirror is of a type suitable to many spots in a home.

Largest Jewel

The Smithsonian institution has acquired the world's largest jewel. The stone is an almost flawless crystal of topaz, weighing 153 pounds, or 350,000 carats. The average topaz for a ring or necklace weighs about five carats. The huge gem was discovered in the Minas Geraes province of Brazil. Its color is pale blue on the outside and a pale sherry on the inside.

Chewing Gum Okayed

Chewing gum, pencils, rubber bands, toothpicks, pipestems and other things are restful and useful forms of exercise for office workers, Prof. H. L. Hollingsworth, of Barnard college in New York city reported recently. Experiments made over a four-year period showed that chewing relaxes tension and allows individuals to apply more energy to the tasks at hand.

The pied-bill grebe is a solitary bird that likes to sit on the water among the reeds, but it is such a quick mover that it can dive beneath the water swiftly enough to dodge gun shot fire.

German Riviera

Don't let a quiz fan catch you on this one: Where is the German Riviera? Travelers say it is at Honnef, not far from Bonn, on the Rhine. It has the best climate in Germany and enjoys spring two weeks earlier than elsewhere in the country.

New Use for Microscope

A new use has been found for the electron microscope, by Drs. Abner Wolf, David Cowen, and Beryl Page of Columbia university. This new super-sharp microscope is able to reveal the exact location, in the cells of glands, muscles, and other tissues, of vital minerals, such as calcium and phosphorus.
